MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT, YALE WISHNICK

Framing 100 Percent Right Positions

In my May membership message, I summarized the four-step strategy James Madison gave to the American people to fight against the unconstitutional laws and regulations of the national government. Madison believed Americans would "throw a fit" if the national government usurped their power. Madison felt Americans would rally, protest, and raise their voices in an organized fashion. But unlike today, Americans during Madison's time were of "one mind." Liberty underpinned the thinking of early Americans where interest groups and lobbyists were not part of the political, economic, or social fabric of the United States. Today, such is not the case. Life for many Americans has become confusing at best and overwhelming at worst. Americans, in many ways, are dependent on the government for their general welfare believing the world has become too complex to resolve their problems.

Enter the Republican Party

By any measure, political polls show the GOP is favored over the Democrats in the coming 2022 election. Republicans are positioned to gain the trust and confidence of independents and disaffected Democrats, not to mention Republicans who have become less than enthusiastic about the GOP. Republican candidates, party officials, and grassroots Republicans have an excellent opportunity to change the image and message of the GOP if they are prepared to alter their strategy for framing and communicating the issues. Equally important, Republicans can initiate Madison's four-step strategy and transform feelings of despair and helplessness into outrage and action to stop government overreach and abuse.

Framing The Issues

To move people to action, issues must be framed in 100 percent right positions. In other words, there is no middle ground. As Republicans, we are 100 percent right, and the Democrats are 100 percent wrong. This messaging brings clarity and purpose to the overarching objectives of the GOP. People know where the Republican Party stands. Examples of 100 percent right positions taken by the GOP could include: *The Penny Plan: Congress shall reduce spending by at least one penny on the dollar from one year to the next. *The US-Mexico Border will remain closed until a comprehensive immigration policy based on merit is developed by Congress and signed into law by the President. *Congress shall immediately transform the United States into the world's leading energy producer and a net exporter. These examples of 100 percent right positions can be used by grassroots Republicans, Republican club members, and Republican Legislative District Precinct Committeemen to convene meetings, hold house parties, voter registration campaigns, and forums to create enthusiasm and passion for the GOP. These sample positions provide focus and directions to advocate for the American people. They also can act as a catalyst for Madison's first step to have Americans enthusiastically engaged and involved in the political process.

Next month, I will explain how we can move from creating 100 percent right positions to Madison's second step, Collective Action.
